From Brand: Amsterdam University Press : Diaspora and Transnationalism: Concepts, Theories and Methods (Amsterdam University Press - IMISCOE Research) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Diaspora and Transnationalism: Concepts, Theories and Methods (Amsterdam

University Press - IMISCOE Research):

Diaspora and transnationalism are concepts that have become very popular in modern academic and political discourses. And while most of the new literature treats the two separately, this book studies these fields alongside one another. Rainer Baubck and Thomas Faist bring together scholars from a wide range of academic disciplines to discuss the concepts, theories, and methodologies used in the study of border-crossing affiliations.

-Diaspora and transnationalism have become buzzwords in popular debates. In this innovative work, Baubck, Faist and their co-authors reclaim the concepts for social science by demonstrating their significance for contemporary migration research.[-]Stephen Castles, Research Chair in Sociology at The University of Sydney[-]A strong, elegant and very welcome map and compass for the concepts, theories, questions and methodological challenges that drive research on the global condition.[-]Peggy Levitt, Professor of Sociology at Wellesley College and author of God Needs No Passport[-]"An insightful and thought-provoking contribution to the theoretical and methodological debates. The chapters provide both fresh and authoritative perspectives on the key issues at stake and underscore the value of cross-disciplinary dialogue."[-]Eva stergaard-Nielsen, Associate Professor of Political Science, Autonomous University of Barcelona[-]'Diaspora' and 'transnationalism' have come to dominate migration studies over the last two decades. Compiled by foremost scholars in the field, this volume skilfully brings together compelling essays that examine concepts, theories and methods surrounding these two terms, their mixed definitions, critiques and social scientific impacts.[-]Steven Vertovec, Director, Max Planck Institute for the Study of Religious and Ethnic DiversityAbout the AuthorRainer Baubck is professor of social and political theory at the European University Institute in Florence. Thomas Faist is professor of transitional and development studies in the Department of Sociology at Bielefeld University.
