whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Diversity Programming for Digital Youth: Promoting Cultural Competence in the Children's Library (Children's and Young Adult Literature Reference):

Combining information about outreach to diverse populations, selection of culturally diverse children's print and digital media, and library programming, this book is the tool librarians need to promote cultural understanding through engaging children's programs designed for today's culturally diverse youth. Provides specific evaluation criteria for selecting high-quality new digital media with cultural content Offers outlines for digital storytime programs that combine new digital media with children's literature representing diverse cultures Presents examples of successful cultural literacy programs for children and families Describes how librarians can promote cultural competence in children via new digital media and match digital apps with multicultural children's literature for use in library programming Includes interviews with successful children's librarians engaged in cultural literacy programs and digital storytimes

"Educators and librarians alike will benefit from the information presented in this book about the need to reach the diverse needs of our youth, who are not only diverse in their makeup but also diverse from the traditional users who are not digital natives." - ARBAonline About the Author Jamie Campbell Naidoo is an endowed associate professor at the University of Alabama School of Library and Information Studies and a regular book reviewer for Library Media Connection.
