David Carr : Open Conversations: Public Learning in Libraries and Museums before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Open Conversations: Public Learning in Libraries and Museums:

Cultural institutions must reimagine their roles as education facilities for their communities and address the public need for conversations in safe and fair places, thereby renewing their essential place in democratic society. This book explains how. An annotated bibliography of key works A standard bibliography

"Carr's thoughts about libraries and museums in the cultural landscape will provide professionals a new way of viewing their institutions. This book will be useful in library school classroom discussions and by professionals who want to broaden the focus and direction of their institutions." - Library Journal
About the Author David Carr, PhD, has observed cultural institutions for four decades and has assisted programs and professionals in an array of settings, such as the Museum of Jewish Heritage, Rhode Island School of Design Museum of Art, and the Queens Museum of Art.
