History of Nashville Volunteer Response to the May 2010 Flood Captured in "Take My Hand"By Lisa"Take My Hand: How Nashville United in the Wake of the May 2010 Flood," honors volunteers' historic response to the 1,000-year that devastated Middle Tennessee. The book includes 20 amazing volunteer stories and color images that feature thousands of volunteers at work sandbagging compromised levies, mucking out flood-soaked houses, pulling debris from waterways, rebuilding homes, and demonstrating the unsinkable spirit of Nashville. It's a stunning tribute to the more than 150,000 volunteers that were mobilized by Hands On Nashville, Middle Tennessee's volunteer resource center, between May 2010 and today. To further these amazing stories of volunteerism, "Take My Hand" is a volunteer project in and of itself. McNeely Pigott Fox Public Relations volunteered to write it; The Buntin Group volunteered to design it; and Ingram Content Group's Lightning Source team manufactures and distributes it. This project is a labor of love for all the volunteers whose gifts of time and talent made it possible, and it's a fitting tribute to volunteer service. All net proceeds from the sale of "Take My Hand" support Hands On Nashville's year-round work to connect volunteers with community need. Visit HON.org to learn more. In a time when so many around the world are feeling the detestation of natural disasters, "Take My Hand" showcases the power of the human spirit and provides hope. It inspires all of us to lend our hands to friends, neighbors, and complete strangers and to live a life of service.

In the first days of May 2010, Nashville, Tenn. was devastated by a 1,000-year flood. All Middle Tennesseans were affected, either personally or through friends' and family members' hardships. Yet out of this tragedy came triumph in the form of a historic volunteer response. "Take My Hand" celebrates the thousands of volunteers who refused to let the flood destroy Nashville. It is about the volunteers who worked night and day to help total strangers, and about Hands On Nashville, the organization that led the volunteer effort.
