A CustomerWhen Christine de Pizan wrote The Book of The City of Ladies, her intention was to defend women from attacks brought on by a popular novel called The Romance of the Rose. In TBOTCOL she defends a woman's right to education, soverienty, and justice. She brings up points such as why women are not responsible for rape, why women are equals in intellect to men, and why women are also warriors. To illustrate her point she uses for examples great women of Christian and Classical History and her own conversations with Reason, Justice, and Rectitude. Mind you, this was written some 90 years before Columbus landed in the Americas, but her message still rings true today. The translation is wonderful and accessible.
