A very thorough examination of the issues and trends in the realm of academic libraries as we know them today.

The Changing Academic Library, Second Edition, number 65 in the ACRL Publications in Librarianship (PIL) series, is a completely revised, enhanced, and updated edition of John Budd's The Changing Academic Library (PIL # 56, 2005). This book has been completely updated and revised to reflect the dynamic states of higher education and academic libraries. It presents a critical examination of major issues facing colleges and universities and the unique challenges that their libraries must come to grips with. Current practice is reviewed, but it is examined in the broader context of educational needs, scholarly communication, politics and economics, technology, and the nature of complex organizations. The book may be used as a text in library and information science courses, as well as an introduction for new professionals and academic administrators.

From Booklist
This new edition of The Changing Academic Library updates and expands the concepts of the original, bringing the content into our current economic climate. This book presents an overview of higher education and the role of libraries within that environment, covering a wide variety of academic models, from private colleges to public universities. It discusses governance models, financing, and organizational culture, in each case identifying the place of the library within that structure. It also covers issues affecting library collections, services, and staffing. This work provides a valuable dose of context for students and anyone else who would like to become an academic librarian. For those of us already serving as academic librarians, it provides a reminder of the issues and pressures that we deal with on a daily basis. --David Tyckoson
