Fred H. Lane : The Concerned Citizen's Guide To Surviving Nuclear, Biological And Chemical Terrorist Attack before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised The Concerned Citizen's Guide To Surviving Nuclear, Biological And Chemical Terrorist Attack:

4 of 4 people found the following review helpful. Complete wast of moneyBy William C. EddeThis book is trite, poorly researched and shallow. What little information is provided is repeated more times than necessary in order to add a little fluff to a still woefully thin volume. Very expensive toilet paper in the event of an emergency.

Written in simple, easily understood language, the book covers personal protection equipment, decontamination agents and procedures, portable ready kits, shelters and sealed rooms, air filtration systems, emergency home-preparedness supplies and much more. But knowing what you need is not enough, so Lane includes a list of suppliers to help you locate reliable and affordable supplies and equipment.

About the Author Fred Lane served in the U.S. Navy from 1963-1970, specializing in damage control and NBC warfare aboard the world's first nuclear-powered guided missile cruiser, the USS Long Beach (CGN-9) and saw duty in the South China Sea during the Vietnam War. He is retired from the Department of Defense with experience in four disciplines: explosive, marine, transportation and industrial safety.
