Revitalization in a Northern Athabaskan Community (First Peoples: New Directions in Indigenous Studies):

For many communities around the world, the revitalization or at least the preservation of an indigenous language is a pressing concern. Understanding the issue involves far more than compiling simple usage statistics or documenting the grammar of a tongue; it requires examining the social practices and philosophies that affect indigenous language survival.

"A scholarly but personal reflection on language issues faced by the Kaska community in British Columbia. The author, Barbara Meek, uses language renewal efforts as a lens through which she pulls into focus the language challenges the community faces as well as some of the reasons those challenges exist. [Meek] also presents ideas for how to move forward." Spoken First
