in Southern Malawi (Studien zur Ethnopsychologie und Ethnopschoanalyse):

In this book, cultural anthropologist Moya Malamusi gives readers a rare insider's view of the personalities and healing practices of traditional asing'anga (healers) in Malawi, southeast Africa. His account is based on over thirty years of participant field experience, which allowed the worldviews and methods of healers to become directly accessible through field interviews transcribed in Chichewa and translated with annotations on terminology. Dissertation. (Series: Studies on Ethnopsychology and Ethnopschoanalysis, Vol. 9) [Subject: African Studies, Sociology, Ethnopsychology]
